Skin changes with time. Starting in our mid-20s, the body slowly makes less collagen and elastin, the proteins that keep skin firm and springy. Sun exposure, genetics and weight changes speed that up. The result can be a softer jawline, fullness under the chin, crepey skin on the arms or belly, or a rougher texture on the face.

Not long ago, the main fix for loose skin was surgery. Today there are in-office options that use controlled heat, called radiofrequency (RF), to encourage your skin to rebuild itself. They do not replace surgery, but for the right person they can make a real, natural-looking difference with little or no time off.

This guide walks through the three tightening treatments our physician-led team offers most often: Morpheus8, EvolveX and Define. You will learn how each one works, which concerns it fits, how many sessions to plan for, what recovery looks like, who should not have RF treatment, and what each one costs at our Hudson, Ohio and Barboursville, West Virginia offices. We also explain where a minimally invasive option like FaceTite, or surgery, makes more sense.

About Serene Med Spa

Serene is a physician-led med spa with offices in Hudson, Ohio and Barboursville, West Virginia, led by Robin Arora, MD and Shweta Arora, MD. We plan every treatment around your goals and health history, and we'll tell you plainly what a treatment can and can't do.

PART 01

How radiofrequency tightens skin

Radiofrequency is a type of energy that turns into gentle heat when it passes through tissue. When the deeper layers of skin are warmed to a controlled temperature, two things happen. First, existing collagen fibers tighten a little right away. Second, the heat signals your body to make new collagen and elastin over the following weeks and months.

That second step is why RF results build slowly. Most of the change you see comes from your own healing response, not from the device itself. Dermatology groups note that collagen-building treatments often take three to six months to show their full effect.

There are two broad ways to deliver RF energy. Surface RF (used by EvolveX and Define) warms the skin from the outside with no needles. RF microneedling (used by Morpheus8) sends the energy through very fine needles so it reaches deeper layers more directly.

> The short version
> RF uses controlled heat to tighten collagen and prompt your skin to make more. Results build over weeks to months, and results vary from person to person.

PART 02

Morpheus8: RF microneedling for texture and tone

Morpheus8 pairs microneedling with radiofrequency. Very fine pins create small channels in the skin and release RF energy at set depths. Our Burst tips (12 and 24 pins) are used on the face, neck and smaller body areas, and the Burst Deep tip (40 pins) is used on larger areas like the abdomen, thighs and arms. Burst technology can deliver energy at several depths in a single pulse.

Because it works both near the surface and deeper down, Morpheus8 is often chosen for texture concerns as well as firmness: fine lines, acne scarring, enlarged pores, uneven tone, and early laxity along the jawline and neck. On the body, it is used for crepey or loose skin on the abdomen, arms, knees and thighs.

A numbing cream is applied first. Sessions usually take 30 to 60 minutes. Our physician will confirm whether it is right for your skin; it is generally considered safe for a wide range of skin tones.

- Typical plan: a series of about three sessions, spaced a few weeks apart
- Recovery: redness and swelling, like a mild sunburn, for 1 to 5 days; some texture or flaking for several days
- Skip workouts, saunas, hot tubs, pools and hot showers for 48 to 72 hours
- Results continue to develop over weeks to months

PART 03

Define: hands-free lifting for the jawline and under-chin

Define by InMode is a needle-free RF treatment focused on the lower face. Two hands-free headsets do the work: Define Cheek treats the cheeks, jowls and lower face, and Define Chin treats the under-chin and jawline. Every session finishes with Forma, a handheld RF tip used on the rest of the face and neck.

The system tracks your skin temperature and eases off once the target is reached, so it feels warm rather than painful. There are no needles and no numbing. You may look a little flushed for about an hour, and makeup is fine right after.

Define is designed for adults with mild to moderate softening: early jowls, a less crisp jawline, fullness under the chin, or early laxity in the cheeks and neck.

- Typical plan: about six sessions, roughly a week apart (manufacturer protocols range from four to eight)
- Session time: about 30 to 45 minutes for one zone, 45 to 60 minutes for chin plus cheek
- Downtime: none for most people
- Most change appears over one to three months; an occasional maintenance visit helps keep results

PART 04

EvolveX: firming skin and toning muscle on the body

EvolveX is a body treatment. Flat applicators strap onto the area and run hands-free while you relax. It combines RF heat, which targets skin and fat, with electrical muscle stimulation, which works the muscle underneath. It has three modes:

Many people consider EvolveX after weight loss, including weight loss on a GLP-1 medication, when skin and muscle tone have not caught up with the scale. It is important to know that EvolveX is not a weight-loss treatment. It works alongside healthy habits or a medical weight-loss plan.

- Tite: RF heat for loose or crepey skin, about 30 to 60 minutes
- Tone: muscle stimulation to build and firm muscle, about 20 to 30 minutes; it feels like strong workout contractions
- Transform: RF plus muscle stimulation for thicker areas with stubborn fat, about an hour
- Common areas: abdomen and flanks, thighs, buttocks and arms
- Typical plan: about six sessions, a week or two apart, then occasional maintenance; larger or multiple areas may need more
- Downtime: none

PART 05

Which treatment fits your concern?

Every plan starts with a consultation, because skin thickness, the amount of laxity, and your goals all matter. Here is how our team often thinks about it.

- Face texture, fine lines, acne scars, pores, or early crepiness: Morpheus8 is usually the first conversation
- Softening jawline, early jowls or fullness under the chin, with no downtime: Define, sometimes paired with Morpheus8
- Loose or crepey skin on the belly, arms or thighs, especially after weight loss: EvolveX, Morpheus8 on the body, or both
- Wanting firmer muscle tone in the core or thighs: EvolveX Tone or Transform
- More noticeable sagging of the jowls and neck: FaceTite or a surgical consultation may fit better

> Thinking about the body after weight loss?
> Our free InBody 580 body-composition scan (available at both offices from October 21, 2026) takes about a minute and shows muscle, body fat and body water on a printout. It can help you and our team track progress and plan body treatments. It is always free.

PART 06

Combining treatments

Skin ages in layers, so many plans use more than one tool. A common example is Define for lift along the jawline plus Morpheus8 for texture and deeper tightening. On the body, EvolveX is often paired with Morpheus8 on the body, or with a medical weight-loss program. FaceTite can also be combined with Morpheus8 on the surface.

Combining does not mean doing everything on the same day. Our team will sequence treatments so your skin has time to recover between steps, and so you can see how you respond. Wrinkle relaxers (neuromodulators) and dermal fillers are separate treatments that some people add for lines and volume, but they do not tighten skin.

PART 07

Who should not have RF treatment

RF is safe for many adults, but it is not right for everyone. Our physician-led team reviews your health history before any treatment. Based on our own treatment guidelines and FDA and professional society guidance, RF treatment is generally avoided or needs special review if you:

- Are pregnant
- Have an implanted electronic device, such as a pacemaker or implanted defibrillator
- Have metal under the skin in the treatment area from an implant or injury, or metal-containing tattoo ink there
- Have an active skin infection or open wound in the area

- Have a bleeding or clotting problem, or take blood-thinning medication (tell us about every medication and supplement you take)
- Have an IUD and are considering body treatment near the pelvis (ask your doctor first)

> A note on safety
> In October 2025 the FDA reminded the public that RF microneedling is a medical procedure, not a cosmetic one, and that serious problems such as burns, scarring, fat loss and nerve damage have been reported with certain uses. The FDA advises choosing a licensed, trained provider and asking which device will be used. At Serene, treatments are overseen by our physician-led team.

How these compare with FaceTite and surgery

Non-surgical RF works on the skin from the outside (or, with Morpheus8, just under the surface). It fits mild to moderate laxity. If skin is very loose, these treatments may not give the change you want.

FaceTite is a minimally invasive step up. Our physician places a thin RF probe under the skin through a few tiny openings, with local numbing while you stay awake, to tighten tissue where laxity starts. Most people need one treatment. Expect swelling and bruising for about a week and a chin strap for several days; most people return to work within a few days. Improvement continues for six to twelve months.

Surgery, such as a facelift, neck lift or tummy tuck, removes extra skin. The American Academy of Dermatology notes that surgery gives the most dramatic results and that non-surgical options cannot match a facelift. After large weight loss, skin often lacks the elasticity to shrink back, and surgical body contouring may be the right path. Surgery also means longer incisions and a longer recovery. If you would be better served by surgery, we will tell you.

Your consultation checklist

- [ ] Bring a list of every medication and supplement you take, including blood thinners
- [ ] Tell us about any pacemaker, defibrillator, metal implant, IUD, or pregnancy or plans to become pregnant
- [ ] Take clear photos of the areas that bother you, in natural light, so you can track change later
- [ ] Ask: Which device and tip will you use, and why for my skin?
- [ ] Ask: How many sessions do you expect I'll need, and how far apart?
- [ ] Ask: What downtime should I plan around for my schedule and events?
- [ ] Ask: Would combining treatments help me, and in what order?
- [ ] Ask: Is my laxity a fit for a non-surgical treatment, or should I consider FaceTite or surgery?
- [ ] Ask: What is my total cost for the full series, and is there a series price?
- [ ] Plan your sun protection: daily SPF 30 or higher, and no tanning before or after treatment

Frequently asked questions

Does it hurt?

Define and EvolveX Tite feel warm. EvolveX Tone feels like strong muscle contractions. Morpheus8 uses numbing cream first; most people feel heat and pressure during the passes. Our team adjusts settings for your comfort.

When will I see results?

Some people notice a little tightening soon after a session, but most change comes as your body builds new collagen. Plan on one to three months for Define and several months for Morpheus8. Results vary.

How long do results last?

Your skin keeps aging, so no result lasts forever. Healthy habits, daily sunscreen and an occasional maintenance session help you keep your results longer.

Can I go back to work the same day?

After Define or EvolveX, yes. After Morpheus8, many people return to work but should expect redness and swelling for a day or two (up to five days). FaceTite usually means a few days off.

Is EvolveX a way to lose weight?

No. EvolveX firms skin and tones muscle, but it does not treat obesity or cause meaningful weight loss. It works alongside healthy habits or a medical weight-loss plan.

I lost a lot of weight. Will these treatments fix loose skin?

They can improve mild to moderate looseness and crepey texture. Large folds of extra skin usually need surgery to remove. Our team will give you an honest assessment.

Is Morpheus8 safe for darker skin tones?
Morpheus8 is generally considered safe for a wide range of skin tones. Our physician will review your skin type and history and choose settings to lower the risk of pigment changes.

Can I do Define and Morpheus8 together?
Yes, many plans use both: Define for lift along the jawline and under-chin, and Morpheus8 for texture and deeper tightening. Our team will space them so your skin can recover.
